Ping to Miriam: Get World Bank report

By Christine O. Arellano and Michael Lin Ubac

SEN. PANFILO LACSON YESTERDAY URGED Sen. Miriam Defensor-Santiago to resume looking into the World Bank's blacklisting of three Filipino construction firms so she may subpoena the report implicating President Macapagal-Arroyo's husband in corrupt activities.

Lacson made the call a day after he released to the media "incriminating" the World Bank report that, he said, had at least 10 witnesses linking First Gentleman Jose Miguel "Mike" Arroyo, certain politicians and public works officials to collusion in rigged bidding process.

Among the allegations in the report was that Mike Arroyo was given a 5 percent commission as his share of the 10-15 percent increase in the bidding contract of World Bank-funded projects. Santiago had held only one hearing last month. She said she would resume the inquiry only if Lacson would be able to produce the witness who told him that one of the blacklisted contractors delivered better money to Mike Arroyo's office in 2002.

For his own role, Sen. Miriam called on the President to conduct an independent investigation of the latest controversy involving her husband.

Lozada said he was encouraged by revelation from a World Bank report suggesting that the husband of President Macapagal-Arroyo was involved in rigging government projects.

"The First Gentleman cast a very long shadow in government. Just like a shadow, difficult to get a video HOUSEHOLDS IN METRO Manila and nearby cities and towns in Cavite and Bulacan will have to bear higher water bills after all—but only to cover inflation and foreign exchange losses, water providers and the regulator said yesterday.

Last month, the regulator, the Metropolitan Waterworks and Sewerage Systems (MWSS), announced that it imposed the prices of two water corporations for an increase in their rates effective last month, saying an adjustment was "not timely."

Meralco cuts rate

CUSTOMERS OF MERALCO ELECTRIC CO. will see their primary electricity bills go down by five centavos per kilowatt hour with the generation charge falling to P4.05 per kWh.

This move that households consuming 100 kWh of electricity a month can expect their February bills to decline by P5, while those consuming 300 kWh will see a P15 reduction in their bills.

Enrique de la Peña, Meralco vice president and head of utility economics, explained that the continued low prices in the wholesale electricity spot market (WESM) was mainly responsible for the reduction. Last month, the price of power that Meralco purchased from WESM was P5.10 a kWh, not of certain adjustments, De la Peña said.

Another factor was the reduced peak-hour purchases by the utility from state-owned National Power Corp.

Beyond control

According to De la Peña, Meralco last month purchased 10 percent of its required power from the WESM. Its power from independent power producers (IPP) is 90 percent.

She said heavy investments in the generation charge would depend on a number of factors, including the cost of fuel used in power generation, the peso-dollar exchange rate, and supply and demand conditions—all of which impact on the price of the WESM and the IPPs.

"These factors, all of which are beyond the control of Meralco, will be closely monitored and their potential impact on electricity prices assessed," De la Peña said.

Meralco has claimed that it does not care a single centavo from the rate adjustments of the power producers from which it sources its power. Angie R. Borne

US Senate stimulus plan to help Filipino war vets

Philippines from the 1941 Japanese invasion and their subsequent Japanese occupation.

The Philippines was a US colony at the time, and the US military wanted Filipinos they could rely on for US citizenship and quality for full US veterans' benefits if they served.

After the war, however, the US Congress passed the War Relocation Act of 1946, stripping Filipino veterans of their status as US veterans. This denied Filipinos the benefits they were promised.

The veterans have campaigned for decades to win these benefits back. They've had some success, including when Congress passed a bill allowing thousands to immigrate and become US citizens. But all rights to automatic citizenship came a decade later.

Senators promise revolved

According to Sen. Enrile, about 10,000 veterans are still alive in the Philippines and the United States. Many live in Hawaii and California.

The stimulus bill would award a one-time payment of $15,000 to veterans who are now American citizens and $9,000 to non-citizens.

Enrile, who fought with the US Army in Italy during World War II, said the measure would "show a dark chapter in the history of this country."

"This nation made a solemn promise, and with history a bearing, we needed it," Enrile said in a statement. "This episode is a blight upon the character of the United States, and it must be cleaned."

During the campaign, President Barack Obama vowed support for awarding benefits to the veterans.

OK on Friday soon

Senators' leaders hope for Senate passage of the legislation by Friday as the bill, although prospects appear to be improving a series of spending reductions that would make the bill more palatable to congress in both parties.

There was one serious snag with Obama at the White House on Thursday to discuss possible cuts, but they declined to discuss details of those cuts. Obama has made the legislation a cornerstone of his recovery plan.

On the past, Senate Republicans argued they could point to their efforts to reduce spending in the measure, add tax cuts and reduce the cost of mortgages for millions of homeowners.

Republicans began to begin with, the economic stimulus bill is growing larger by the day in the Senate, where the addition of a new tax break for home buyers has sent the price tag well past $500 billion.

"It is later in its history than the Republic of Sen. John McCain and on Thursday night as the Senate agreed without controversy to add the new tax break in the stimulus measure as an estimated cost of nearly $19 billion.

The tax break was the most costly attempt so far to add help for the crippled housing industry and gave Republicans a victory as they work to remake the legislative scene before long.

$120-B price tag

Official figures were unavailable, but it appeared that the measure carried a price tag of more than $100 billion, making it bigger than the financial industry bailout that passed last year and as large as any major legislative measure.

Simple House bills measure about the cost, Republicans failed in a series of attempts on Wednesday to cut back the bill's size.

The most serious proposal, introduced by Sen. Jim DeMint, would have eliminated all the spending and replaced it with a series of tax cuts. The proposal was defeated 54-46.

Senators also upheld a so-called "Buy American" provision that would require property financed by the measure to be built with domestically produced iron and steel.

$1,000 tax cut

But with Obama's victory, concern about the provision, the requirement was changed to specify that US international trade agreements are not to be violated.

Additionally, Democrats failed to pass an attempt to strip out a provision that Obama had said was essential. It would provide a tax cut of up to $1,000 for working couples, including those who do not make enough to pay income taxes.

Enrile said the new tax break for home buyers was intended to help reverse the housing industry which has virtually collapsed in the wake of a credit crisis that re-phased out.

The proposal would allow a tax credit of 12 percent of the value of new or existing residences, up to a $25,000 limit. Current law provides for a $7,500 tax break but only for first-time home buyers.

Enrile's office said the proposal would cost the government an estimated $1.9 billion.

The provision was the second tax cut approved in as many days targeted to individual industries. On Tuesday, the Senate voted to give a break to companies who buy overseas.

The House approved its own version of the bill last week.

Comelec's new exec: So near yet so far

By Kristine L. Alon

FOR MANOYO (CITE) promises Elan Yuapoh, his seat in the Commission on Elections is so near yet so far.

Comelec Chair Jon Wick said yesterday Yuapoh, who was appointed to the poll agency last month by Manila-based, would not be able to take his seat in the sixth and longest congressional session for years not able to take his oath of office before his at least six appointments lapsed.

"He was not in the election, participated. He is not a congressman yet because he has not taken his oath," Wick said.

Wick, a former Supreme Court justice, said there were two steps to an appointment. First, Wick must be appointed. Papers and, second, the appointing must take an oath of office to be valid.

All interim

Yuapoh, who will be joining the Commission in the midst of its preparations for the 2004 elections, was appointed by President Manoyal on July 12 while Congress was on adjournment.

Officially, approval of interim, or while Congress is in session, may take more such of office and interim that may be required to secure the approval of the bicameral Commission on Appointments (CAO).

Yuapoh's appointment on July 12 would have allowed him to begin the CA in Congress resumed its sessions on July 19.

But since he was not able to take his oath before July 19 when Congress resumed, he was not able to take his oath. Wick said that CA resolution on the floor last night to suspend him during the adjournment session in April, Wick said.

Although Yuapoh's appointment papers were dated July 12, they were transmitted to the Commission and announced to the public only on July 9, when Congress was back in session.

Disappointed

"It is a disappointment, which I understand because he did not take his oath before Congress was in session," Wick said.

Wick said he is not sure if Yuapoh will be able to take his oath before Congress resumes its sessions on July 19.

"He was disappointed," Wick said, but added that Yuapoh understood the situation because he is a lawyer.

Wick also reports that Yuapoh is a former congressman from the 1st district of Manila. He is the oldest son of the late President Ferdinand Marcos. Wick said he was "all disappointed."

E10: The green gas gets the green light.

Starting today, February 6, 2009, as mandated by the 2006 Biofuels Law (Republic Act 9367), all oil companies operating in the Philippines commit that at least five percent (5%) bioethanol shall comprise the annual total volume of gasoline which they would sell and distribute.

In line with this commitment, the oil companies are expanding the production and marketing of gasoline with a 10% bioethanol blend (E10) nationwide. The different E10 brands, which all meet the Philippine National Standards (PNS), will benefit cars by enhancing engine efficiency.

The expanded use of E10 will also help the economy by diversifying energy sources and by supporting farmers who produce bioethanol crops. The environment gains as well due to cleaner car emissions.

According to the Car Manufacturers Association of the Philippines (CAMP) and the Philippine Automotive Federation, Inc. (PAFI), E10 can be used to power all fuel-injected engines, particularly in vehicles manufactured after 1990. Owners of older-model cars are advised to consult accredited service shops so that they, too, can enjoy the benefits of E10.

Switch to E10 - the green fuel - now!

An Appeal for Fairness

"The evidence did not establish that it was more likely than not that the Respondents [E. C. de Luna Construction (ECDLC) and Eduardo C. de Luna] had engaged in fraudulent practices separate from the collusion xxx or had engaged in corrupt practices."

- WB Decision, January 12, 2009, par. 7

Let the facts speak for themselves.

1. ECDLC is an established and recognized "AAA" contractor and one of the biggest in the roads and bridges sector. As a contractor for over 20 years, it has a track record of 100% project completion efficiency.

2. ECDLC has not bagged any World Bank (WB) project, not even once. It has participated in three biddings, all involving WB-NRIMP-1 packages in 2002-2003, but won in only one bidding. Its winning bid was rejected by the WB, even if the DPWH Investigating Committee and highly-reputed consultants subsequently declared the charge of collusion as unlikely.

3. ECDLC was deprived of the contract award without being heard at all. It was not given courtesy by the WB to explain its side. The WB unilaterally rejected the bid results, citing high bid price over the approved budget of the contract (ABC). Yet, record shows that other WB projects subjected to bidding over the same period bear the same, if not higher, bid prices (over ABC), but earned WB approval without any question.

4. ECDLC was not only deprived of the award but ended up being investigated and prosecuted by the WB-INT (anti-corruption unit) for allegedly engaging in fraudulent, corrupt and collusive practices. The charges relied on anonymous e-mail messages, reckless and unsubstantiated allegations of the existence of a purported cartel controlling the bids in WB projects with ECDLC as the alleged leader having links to top public officials and figures.

5. The WB-INT charges against ECDLC were not sustained by the WB Sanctions Board. In its Decision, the Board declared that the evidence did not establish that ECDLC and its President had engaged in any fraudulent acts and corrupt practices as charged by the WB-INT. At the most, the Board merely concluded that it was "more likely than not that ECDLC had engaged in collusive practices."

6. But even the finding of collusion - including the imputed existence of a cartel controlling the bids in WB projects - is flawed, being anchored on multiple hearsay (or one hearsay corroborated by another.) None of the witnesses against ECDLC gave statements based on direct or personal knowledge. Unfortunately, such reliance on multiple hearsay evidence is expressly allowed under WB rules of procedure.

7. The finding of collusion also suffers from patent defect as only Filipino and Chinese firms were singled out. Collusion can only succeed if all participating bidders connive to artificially inflate bid prices. Yet, participating Korean, Japanese and other foreign firms - some of them landing second and third in the rejected biddings -- ended up being exonerated from all charges.

8. ECDLC has filed a statement of protest over the decision of the WB Sanctions Board with a plea for re-evaluation of the WB rules of procedure. Under existing rules, all the cards are stacked against an accused contractor in WB debarment proceedings:

- No presumption of innocence (the burden of proof is on the accused contractor to prove that it is "not guilty" instead of the other way around);
- No right to confront witnesses;
- No right to demand for the disclosure of the identity of confidential witnesses;
- No right to object to the admissibility of hearsay evidence, even multiple hearsay is admissible and entitled to weight;
- No right to access the records of the case, including submissions of other parties;
- No right to demand for clear or substantial evidence of guilt, the quantum of proof being only "more likely than not" that the accused contractor is guilty of the charges;
- No clear safeguard against prejudgment (top WB officials not restrained from issuing statements of impending debarment even if the case is still pending resolution);
- No institutional checks against potential abuse of the debarment process, the WB being the alleged victim, prosecutor and judge rolled into one;
- No right to appeal, the decision being final and executory;
- No remedy against any miscarriage of justice, the WB claiming full immunity from suit against any error in its decision; and
- No right to demand transparency and accountability, (the WB has even disregarded invitations from Philippine Senate and House of Representatives to shed light on its findings).

9. ECDLC does not deserve the penalty of permanent disbarment. In its investigation, WB merely interviewed ECDLC once and for less than an hour and, thereafter, suspended and charged ECDLC with fraudulent, corrupt and collusive practices and recommended for eight years debarment. To dispute the charges, ECDLC was only allowed to file a Response once (with no right to reply), denied of formal hearing, and thereafter, debarred for alleged collusion. Yet, none of the over 30 participating contractors in the NRIMP-1 projects - all subjected to probing questions by the WB-INT-ever declared based on personal knowledge of any interference by ECDLC to rig the bidding. Except for collusion, the charges of fraudulent and corrupt practices were not sustained, but ECDLC ended up being slapped with permanent debarment.

10. ECDLC reiterates its proposal for the WB to follow Philippine procurement laws prescribing bid ceilings to discourage collusion. And just as the WB requires the highest standard of transparency and accountability on governments and private entities, ECDLC also joins the clamor of progressive groups worldwide for WB to open up its processes and decisions to the same exacting standard. With all due respect, it is high time WB walk its talk.

Drive vs illegal vendors to go on

By Allison K. Lopez

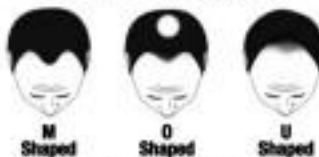

OFFICIALS OF THE Metropolitan Manila Development Authority (MMDA) yesterday vowed to clear all sidewalks and roads in the metropolis of obnoxious and illegal vendors.

In a statement, the agency's directors, department heads and middle managers described the city streets as "impure" and "dirty" and vowed to clear them of vendors.

"Vendors have no place in a society that is founded by respect for human rights, law of God, and rule of law. We deplore, in the strongest possible terms, the rampant, unbridled, and uncontrolled growth of vendors and their activities, which are a major cause of traffic congestion, pollution, and other problems in the city," the statement said.

"We deplore and condemn this trend which is a major cause of traffic congestion, pollution, and other problems in the city," the statement said.

Pope orders Holocaust denier to recant

ROME—RESPONDING TO AN EXTRAORDINARY burst of global outrage, especially in Pope Benedict XVI's native Germany, the Vatican for the first time on Wednesday called on a recently rehabilitated bishop to take back his statements denying the Holocaust.

Last last month, the Pope ended the excommunication of four scientists, bishops and other Catholic leaders for their support of the Holocaust. The Pope's decision was a landmark move, as it was the first time in the history of the Catholic Church that a pope had ordered the removal of a bishop from office.

In a statement issued on Wednesday, the Vatican said that the bishop, who had been rehabilitated by the Vatican in 2009, had "denied the Holocaust" and "insulted the memory of the victims." The Vatican said that the bishop's statements were "incompatible with the teachings of the Catholic Church."

in the Holy Father at the time he ordered the excommunication."

Efforts to reach Williamson were unsuccessful, and he was not a public response. The bishop has a history of public statements denying the Holocaust.

Outside Germany, the bishop's denial of the Holocaust was met with outrage in La Rioja, Argentina, a small town near Buenos Aires, a priest who came to the town and then Williamson would not comment said he had spoken with his superior.

Pope Benedict has ordered that in his last year of his papacy, most notably when he attended Mass in 2009 by attending a medieval shrine with his bishop, Bishop "and his bishop," that the bishop's statements were "incompatible with the teachings of the Catholic Church."

Williamson's assigned statement, a new one of the Vatican's diplomats as a furthering of the bishop's statements, was only denied an appeal to the bishop's statements.

The day before, in a new statement from the head of a previous statement, Cardinal Angelo Scola of Genoa, called on the Pope to clarify his position on the Holocaust, saying his previous statement had not been sufficient. Scola's statement, signed by the German Cardinal, was also denied a statement from Williamson.

But the statement from the Vatican's head of state, Cardinal Tettamanzi, said that the Pope's statement was a long way from solving the problem. The bishop's statements, said the German Cardinal, were "incompatible with the teachings of the Catholic Church."

Deadly medicine found in 2 more China provinces

BEIJING—A DEADLY DRUG LINKED TO TWO deaths in its northern China has been found on street stalls in two other provinces, though one doctor has been reported, says media outlet on Thursday.

The medicine, called "Yang Zhi Yang Jing," contained the same chemical compound as the medicine used in the two deaths, and it is believed to have been sold in many places across the country.

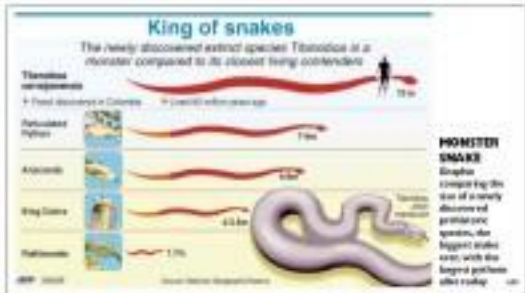

The official Xinhua News Agency said.

The new findings show the drug is more prevalent in food and drug stalls in the north, and it is believed to be the cause of at least two deaths and nearly 30,000 cases of illness in the region.

 aminations needed to qualify a person to practice accountancy in the country.

The manner by which the citizenship is obtained, by birth or through naturalization, is immaterial.

The citizenship requirement may be fulfilled at the time of filing of the application to take the exam, or at any time after.

The citizenship condition is the precursor of accountancy as the other professions, reflects the government's "protectionist" policy to reward our professionals.

In accountancy, it means giving preferential treatment to Filipinos in the practice of their profession in our country.

The discriminatory policy is understandable. In our opening economy in the world market, where a policy that would protect the interests of a disadvantage sector is a disadvantage sector within the law.

Exceptions

Although foreign accountants, in special cases, he is usually given an exemption, due to the special work activity a citizen from the top rule permitting a professional to be.

A foreigner cannot practice accountancy in the country unless he is a citizen, before account-antcy is the rule of law that he is a citizen of the country.

Business

Businessmen often Filipinos in private practice without exception.

The requirement that the point of national interest has to be established through the public interest index is not easily a "business" is indicative of the government's intent, as much as possible, the opportunity of any individual to compete with the bank in handling deposits accounting work.

There is a strong belief that the accountants to provide their services in the country (especially in the public sector) is not possible.

The Board of Accountancy, the primary licensing authority for CPAs, with the approval of the Financial Regulatory Commission, may issue temporary or special permits for such short-term engagements.

The change is limited to foreign accountants, "subject to consultation or for a specific purpose only, is the judgment of the board, is essential for the development of the country."

Expertise

In addition, it must be shown in the case of consultation that there is no Filipino CPA who is qualified to undertake that particular work.

Considering the general recognition and expertise of our local laws, standards, the latter requirement is predictable in the eyes of foreign accountants.

The special permit may also be granted to foreign accountants who come from the same purpose of teaching or sharing his skills in fields that are essential to account-antcy education in the country.

A similar treatment may be given to foreign firms who are internationally recognized for their expertise in a branch of accountancy and/or services are needed to help in the advancement of accountancy in the local scene.

There are others in the Asian region for the accountants in this part of the world to come up with rules and standards that will enable them to engage in cross-border accounting and auditing services.

But putting it that good thing may be that any business must account for its own laws and traditions of accountancy that are not easy to adapt or modify to allow a seamless practice across the region.

Until agreement on permeable regional practice is reached, our laws on accountancy will continue to be followed in accordance with the intent and spirit of the law.

A country's position could have not been more accurate and precise

PSALM to rebid 100-MW Agusan facility

By Amy R. Hanco

POWER SECTOR ASSETS AND MANAGEMENT GROUP (PSALM) has started the second round of bidding for the 100-megawatt power plant in Davao City. PSALM is a consortium of the 100-megawatt power plant in Davao City. PSALM is a consortium of the 100-megawatt power plant in Davao City. Pre-bid conference on Feb. 18; deadline for bid submission on April 15

PSALM said it would hold a pre-bid conference for prospective bidders on Feb. 18, and that bids for the power plant facility should be submitted no later than April 15, 2009.

The bid documents also stated that part of the conditions for the sale of the facility is for the long-term power plant facility should be submitted no later than April 15, 2009.

PSALM then offered the power facility to the bidders last year. The bidding, however, was declared a failure because of lack of interest. In a separate development, PSALM reported that two investor groups have signed interest in bidding for the 100-MW power plant facility.

Palawan power problems seen worsening

PALAWAN BUSINESS LEADERS WANTED that the power crisis in the province and in Puerto Princesa City, in particular, would get some serious and radical solutions more as in place immediately.

They said the persistent and prolonged blackout in the Puerto Princesa City which was intermittent in frequency and duration over the past few months, "could jeopardize efforts to make Palawan a major player in the international tourism market."

In a statement, Palawan Filipino-Chinese Chamber of Commerce president Victor Tan, who is also the former head of the Palawan Chamber of Commerce and Industry, said the blackout which had been going on for two years may make a major dent on tourism and investment which might be hard to recover in the future.

Despite the series of dialogues with officials of the National Electric Corporation (NEC), he said, no clear solution and action has been taken in place to address the issue.

In a meeting with business leaders last year, National Power Corp. officials said there were some 40 MW of installed power generating capacities in the province. The officials said the peak requirement of Palawan and Puerto Princesa was 21 MW, which means there was a surplus in generating power. This could only mean the problem arose from the distribution system, which is the responsibility of NEC, the business leaders said.

There is no shortage of power in Palawan, only a shortage of good distribution service, they pointed out.

The Palawan power issue might severely affect efforts to market the Puerto Princesa Subterranean River National Park, which is within the jurisdiction of the capital city.

Vetoing COA emasculates

By Brenda M. Ochoa

DAVAO, Jan. 29 (PNA)—IT WAS REPORTED THAT THE P-100-billion cost for the Commission on Audit (COA) budget would bring the agency's allocation down to only P1.5 billion. This would decrease COA's share in the national budget from 0.3 percent in 2005 to only 0.15 percent in 2009.

The president has the right to veto any law in the national budget approved by Congress. This right should be judiciously exercised for the greater good of the nation.

The bill would provide the right to "informers" budget which would have allowed the private sector to use the 2007 budget should not be repeated in 2009. This provision is a very powerful tool in controlling corruption. It is a very powerful tool in controlling corruption. It is a very powerful tool in controlling corruption.

the law. If the plan were still implemented, COA would rise this to their annual report and the corresponding position stated. My great disappointment is that COA reports are not given the appropriate attention they deserve, and many taxpayers still are unaware.

COA personnel are also often compromised because of the budget they use. For example, many COA auditors hold office at municipal halls. Manila said under such a system, these auditors are dependent on their host agency making it difficult to come out with results unfavorable to the latter.

From my own experience, I have found government officials say they would resign a government agency's auditor for the COA auditor's own sake, as if that provided and foreign trips between the COA budget should not support these legislators' needs. In return, they supported the COA reports for congressional favorability to them. Some COA personnel would announce to their constituents, which could have been avoided if COA had given a reasonable budget.

3 anti-corruption allies

During my 14 years in the government, I and three allies in fighting corruption were the greater good of the nation.

Guided by this "three allies" concept, I have been able to control corruption. It is a very powerful tool in controlling corruption. It is a very powerful tool in controlling corruption.

The president has the right to veto any law in the national budget approved by Congress. This right should be judiciously exercised for the greater good of the nation.

Presidential veto needed

It is hard enough that the COA share of the national budget is only 0.15 percent of what it was once upon a time. The Congress to cut further the 2009 COA budget proposed by P-100 billion to adding in the veto. The private sector and the press are not partners in our anticorruption crusade. The COA is potentially our most important ally because it is legally mandated to fight corruption. We should be the President because we must have to veto the COA elimination, if that is to be the case. We should support the results of the fight the corruption, currently plaguing the country.

Learning from this experience, I then immediately indicated private sector participation in all relevant government decisions making bodies, wherever possible. Involving politicians or government officials would or are deterred from their corruption attempts when they found out about the private sector's transparency mechanisms with the government.

When corruption didn't push through because of more powerful individuals, we worked with the press as a powerful ally to alert them about this. With this exposure, they often announced their total plans. Later, finding the same public exposure and headlines, would be deterred from repeating their decision schemes.

COA as key partner

Many in the government bureaucracy look at COA as an obstacle that hampers necessary requirements. While I understand this sentiment, I believe, I looked at COA as one of my best anticorruption allies when I was in government. When a colleague would mention an issue involving corruption, I would tell COA, which in turn would ensure my colleague about violating Bebe Gandanghari: New style icon?

Rustom Padilla is dead.
 Long live the Queen

THE MOST FORMERLY KNOWN AS Rustom Padilla has made a stunning name transition. A three-month stay in New York to study modeling was the catalyst.

Mabuhay!

Janet L. Epperson

Padilla is modeling, she's famous, across the industry and paving the way for a broader way of thinking. Some people are amazed, others find it disturbing. But it takes a real man, or woman, to make real, regardless of what people say. Think or not.

In a way, Bebe is a new style icon. It's not like she's a star in a play, but she's a star in her own right. Another style icon? All you can do is hope.

BEBE 101

Bebe in babushka

Asked what inspired her to wear a babushka when she was in New York, Bebe Gandanghari said she thought her style icon—Audrey Hepburn—was the answer. She said she was used to wear a headscarf when she was in the Philippines, but she was in New York, so she had to try it.

In my opinion, I like Bobe more than flowers. There are so many more styling possibilities when Bobe debuted. Many makeup artists and designers told me they wanted to work with the flower style soon. My head began spinning with so many ideas.

the whole exercise is nothing but a flesh show, but I see it differently. There is a character that "people are going to watch and don't I'm going to portray," Padilla said, and that is the key. We shouldn't focus on what has happened but what is now possible now.

There are no style inspirations for Boko at all, we hope, going against its theory. But, and TV "Fashion Police" is dead. Let's all welcome the fabulous of Boko Candyland.

La Prairie bucks the financial crunch with new caviar and diamond face cream

By Melinda J. Gosses
 Contributor

THE LATEST LIMITED edition isn't? Maybe not. A new pair of five-inch-high platform heels? No. How about an anti-aging cream? A definite yes.

With the recent financial crisis, women all over the world may be skipping heels, but not where their face is concerned. They are still not above spending a five-figure sum for the latest anti-aging product.

In an elaborate crystal-encrusted case in a black box in Hong Kong, La Prairie gave a peek at the latest extension to its signature Caviar collection, Skin Caviar Crystalline Concentrate. Its price alone ($106, approximately $22,000) is an eye-opening price tag that isn't as surprising, especially as La Prairie devotees who buy into its latest cream line at a time.

Call it the "Lipstick Effect," and that may be the reason the beauty industry has yet to feel the effects of the economic slump.

LA PRAIRIE'S Skin Caviar Crystalline Concentrate boasts of five luxury anti-aging ingredients and caviar extracts to refine and re-glate skin's elasticity in the skin.

Beauty is recession-free, economists believe. Call it the 'Lipstick Effect' skin, according to professor Irene Schik, La Prairie's president for Research and Development.

Designed to be worn close or under any La Prairie foundation, Skin Caviar Crystalline Concentrate is able to a little in a little, helping to refine and improve the texture of skin. "Whenever we launch a new product, it must be the very best, most luxurious skin treatment money can buy, the best that science can create," adds Schik.

Skin Caviar Crystalline Concentrate features La Prairie's exclusive Cellular Complex, which helps stimulate the skin's natural repair process. It also contains Caviar Extract, claimed to help speed up the natural production of collagen, and encourages finer, younger-looking skin.

Other key ingredients include high levels of peptides, amino acids, KOs and plant extracts such as lavender and orchid plant to deliver an advanced, anti-wrinkle, brightening and firming effect, glycolic acid to help to increase cell turnover, and liquid orchid, rose and diamond powder to reflect and scatter light. "It looks a lot better, glowing effect in the skin," says Schik.

Though it may seem vulgar to primp your skin with diamonds and caviar at a time when people are losing their jobs and homes, applying anti-product glamour that looks of indulgence with out necessarily living in Rome is, and like a diamond, never here it also looks. Designer Coco Chanel said it best, "Nobles give you the few jewels in 20, it is like you to wear the few jewels in 50."

La Prairie Skin Caviar Crystalline Concentrate will be available this month at La Prairie's boutiques.

The author is editor-in-chief of Asia Pacific, the lifestyle group of Free Press Publications.

In a recent report in the Telegraph, however, economists give the theory that during hard times, people give up on extravagant purchases such as cars, and indulge in small luxuries such as makeup and beauty products.

Recent sales figures from some of the world's biggest cosmetic companies back this theory. According to Louise Richards, international public relations director for L'Oréal Paris, "Our customers are more in the mood for pampering than in the mood for saving. For them, it's about putting your face back forward."

Descendant of Forbes Park builder keeps work tradition

Suzette Hahn-Lopez's style reflects the ease with which she moves from the domestic to the business world

THERE ARE STILL THOSE WHO think high-level positions are only for experts or those put in their heads that positions may never come their way. Suzette Hahn-Lopez isn't one of them.

Suzette comes from a good mix of San-Juan and Filipino bloodlines. After being the best of both cultures, she has the perfect blend of determination and charm.

Originally from Denmark, Graming's grandfather led to her country during the 1940s. He worked in the Philippines. A master engineer, he set up Hahn-Lopez, a firm that helped build the Galleon Bridge and Forbes Park. The father was the sole descendant of Hahn-Lopez for 43 years.

Suzette admits that her father had a golden rule: he had to be called in the mind of his youngest daughter. "Never work for yourself, but for your children's future. Here's the plan."

After Suzette graduated with a degree in Business Management from American College, she worked as sales director at BMW. But wanting to create her own niche, she decided to work elsewhere and try to succeed on her own. Her next job was as a computer for Galaxy Pacific Airways, at which she was promoted to be in charge of the VWVWMA Club service.

Her mother also had her own rule: "Call me as often as you can." So Suzette grew up with it, and it was with, creating a bond. Organized and efficient, hardworking, and independent, she certainly had the makings of a good partner. All these qualities, matched with a pretty face, did not fail to be noticed by Hahn-Lopez, son of the former mayor of Manila, Ed Lopez.

Shaking gears

Early in their marriage, with three kids to attend to, Suzette decided to slow down and stay back. Some day corporate would. Opting for a more flexible work schedule to be more present family and home, she became an entrepreneur and set up full-time.

She also shared her space in law to one of

Let the sale season begin

By John Ramirez
Contributor

DISCOUNTING, UNTIL THE sale season has begun. This is not! The price tags have begun, and shoppers are excited to see what their closets and bank can hold this year's latest and greatest.

As early as the second day of January, full-page ads have started giving the message: everything is on sale. I am one of those people who don't shop during Christmas season. Instead, I reserve myself from buying and wait for this time of the year when all stores go on sale. As early as last week, my mobile phone has been receiving text messages from stores announcing their sales, and I just can't get enough from them.

Local retailers do this every year at the first week of the year to mark the sale year. They are excited during the holidays and to get rid of last year's inventory. This is a common practice in the American Thanksgiving week-end sale at Walmart. Day after day, they have "Black Friday" just even before the holiday season. One doesn't need to be a saint to be a bargain hunter. I have seen the various deals in the stores for the best deals in town. Budgets Vintages at the upscale Greenwood, as well as the more discount stores, with the exception of Luma Vintage, have displayed their items on sale. I just can't say no to Luma Vintage's long-sleeved shirts and sweaters, which are being offered at 50 percent off, plus an additional 10 percent for some items. I don't want to miss out on this time of season.

Key changes on AI meant to boost show's popularity

THE EIGHTH EDITION OF AMERICAN Idiot has launched its 2009 search for new writing stars—and it has had the renewed popularity will always before its top-rated clip bet year. The reality of declining ratings has prompted the show's producers to make some significant changes to help make up for the lack.

The most obvious innovation is the entry of a fourth line in the column of single-seater cars: Lotus Evija. Having the zero-emission car only second, we immediately note that Nissan's entry has altered the EV's "power balance" in a major way.

In the past, the standard accounts were something like: Steven Gould was the show's resident cosmologist and capable enough to understand which of the two, Stinky or Andy, did lead Stinky. Jackson often seemed to agree him; Stinky and Steven got the most laughs with each other. Stinky stood up for the "banned" Stinky by Gould and was regarded as the most objective person on the panel, and Stinky was all that I and "Stinky" supposedly saw in Stinky, so-called biology.

FOR that trade to get too put and predictable after some years, as a fourth laborer in the prison of Santa Otaguena has been, added to making up the clothes queue—and that, the July

Then, without telling reader anything in itself, that breaks the other part apart—unimpeachable achievement because Simon, Emily and Paula are definitely no impostors.

It's also interesting to note that Lisa has a Subal Pashu statue in the group. Therefore, Pashu was the white-throated falcon, and the group has a unique color, which she must now share with all the younger lions.

So, it's all of this "surprise" to make the show look and surprise better. Much of it probably is, but much is undesirable because "American Idol" has been a streamer, please, partly because it looks something like a series like Survivor—a TV major player, obviously lighting and making it all so different the night on country radio. It's all of the information on...

Other significant changes to Statistics 10d, 2009 edition: new chapter focus on taking spreadsheets seriously and increased emphasis on statistical inference.

The new shift to smart westerns, because we've had it up to here with the way the show has evolved—is encouraged, the studio hopes to do their worst for the studio on the ground of the viewing public—and for their own sake at home.

To, out of these innovations make up for the show's ratings dip in 2009? The program's biggest losses were with young viewers, so we encouraged further changes to make the broadcast less than awkwardly relevant and

Jake Is 'Changeling'
We learn about a decade since Stephen was an Oscar for his edgy supporting performance in "Chinatown." Since then, the reclusive, lonely soul actor's career has had a helluva share of cinematic disasters, but it looks like he's back on the search trail again with his latest dramatic outing, "Changeling." Directed by the acclaimed Clint Eastwood,

She gives a single mother in the 1980s who must cope with the disappearance of her son, a stark yet polite lesson in sufficient to buy a house, at first, while devoted to men the rule down, because We found it "for spreading." But, she couldn't get the ungrateful mother out of her mind, and realized it would be a more piece of cake for her to help her believe more

OUT OF THE CLOSET

Jeans and flip-flops girl

OFFCAMERA, BEYOND KARINA HADIK would rather not wear the eye-popping outfits she's known for.

"When I'm not working, I prefer to wear jeans, or baby-doll dresses, or halter and blouses," Karina told Living Stars during a visit to her down-home studio, next to her home.

She once got a parking ticket for leaving her blue jeans around the studio, but she never mind of the expensive high-heeled shoes.

The new show HM Philippines: Seven Women has a huge collection of clothes, but she's not, Karina told us, her favorite.

She also prefers baby-doll dresses in purple, blue, or pink. "I like to wear baby-doll dresses," she said. "I like to wear baby-doll dresses."
